Same issues surround the Columbia River system.

Seems like appropriate/updated WQS are the foundation the BDCP should be build on...or should be.

No idea what they might ask. There is an ongoing dispute/lack of clarity/you name it about how the BDCP (an ESA vehicle) and the Water Quality Standards program fit together. Our view is that you need to move forward on any revised WQS in order to put the BDCP into the real world. That view is shared by the State Board and the Delta Stewardship Council. But others may differ.

What types of "asks" might they be asking?

If the SWRCB is doing the workshops, etc what role do we have other than oversight and technical, if that?

At the meeting, you may want to listen for any "asks" about the State Board's workshops on revising the Delta outflow standards. Those workshops (three, I think) start in September, and lead up to staff proposals (and hopefully Board action) on new water quality standards. We are being very supportive of the Board's action at this time, given that they haven't revised them in 17 years (since Bob was doing Delta things).

any idea when it may be released? Really, I am not trying to pour salt in a wound, just wanted to give Bob a heads up if asked by the group.

What should he know other than DoI and CA released something last week?
